Works of the Right Rev. Bishop Hay of Edinburgh

by

Hay, George, 1729-1811
Strain, Bishop

Originally published in 1871 by:
Edinburgh : W. Blackwood

Setup for printing by PublicDomainReprints.org from a scanned version obtained from an online digital archive

2009
WORKS

OF THE

RIGHT REV. BISHOP HAY

Digitized by Microsoft ©
ever yours in love

George Hay
WORKS

OF THE

RIGHT REV. BISHOP HAY

OF EDINBURGH

IN FIVE VOLUMES

VOL. I.

THE SINCERE CHRISTIAN: VOL. I.

A NEW EDITION
EDITED UNDER THE SUPERVISION OF
THE RIGHT REV. BISHOP STRAIN

PRINTED BY WILLIAM BLACKWOOD AND SONS
EDINBURGH
1871
CONTENTS OF VOL. I.

INTRODUCTION.

CHAPTER I.

OF GOD.

His nature, 5. His infinite perfection, ib.; power, 6; wisdom, ib.; goodness, 7; justice, ib.; mercy, 8; holiness, 9; truth, ib.; beauty, ib. His eternity, 10; immensity, 11; incomprehensibility, ib.; immutability, 12.

CHAPTER II.

OF THE BLESSED TRINITY.

The term defined, 14. The Unity of God, ib. His Unity and His Trinity in Unity proved from Scripture, 14-16. In what the three persons of the Trinity distinct, 16-18. The Son and Holy Ghost both truly God, 18, 19. The Divine nature the same in all the three persons, 19. This doctrine a subject for faith alone, ib.

CHAPTER III.

OF CREATION AND PROVIDENCE.

God, Creator and Sovereign Lord, 20. Creation defined, ib. The creation of the world, 21. God's end therein, ib. His preserving care and sovereign power, 22-26. His Providence, definition of, 26; incapable of error or failure, 27; all things overruled by, 27-29; how manifested by God for the good of His creatures, 29-31; its relation to the evils of sin and suffering, 31-42.
CONTENTS.

CHAPTER IV.

OF THE CREATION AND FALL OF THE ANGELS.

Their rank in creation, and man's, 43. God's end in the creation of His other creatures, ib. The nature of the angels, ib. In what state and for what end created, 43, 44. The sin of those who fell, and its consequences, 44. Scriptural account of their original perfection and fall, 45, 46.

CHAPTER V.

OF THE CREATION AND FALL OF MAN.

The nature of man, 47. God's end in his creation, ib. His creation of our first parents, 47, 48. Their original state of innocence, grace, and happiness, 48-50. Their fall through transgression of the Divine command, and Scriptural account thereof, 50-52. The consequences, 52-54.

CHAPTER VI.

OF THE PROMISE OF A REDEEMER, AND STATE OF MANKIND TILL HIS COMING.

The reconciliation of man with God possible to God alone, 55, 56. His compassion for man, 56, 57. When the promise of a Redeemer first made, 57; when fulfilled, ib. The condition of mankind in the interval, 57-60. The Divine favour towards the Jews, 60-63. Their condition and that of the rest of mankind at the coming of the Redeemer, 63, 64. The revelation of Divine truths through Him, and their nature, 64-66. His principal offices, 66. His name, 67.

CHAPTER VII.

OF JESUS CHRIST OUR REDEEMER.

CONTENTS.

CHAPTER VIII.

OF THE OFFICE AND DIGNITIES OF THE REDEEMER.

His office defined, 78. His birth, 78-80. His infancy, youth, and early manhood, 80. His public life, 80-83. His passion, death, and burial, 83-85. The descent of His soul into Limbo, 85-92. His resurrection, 92-96. His ascension, 96-98. His dignities of name, 98; as King, ib.; as Head of the Church, 99, 100-111; as Judge, 100, 111-125.

CHAPTER IX.

OF THE BENEFITS OF OUR REDEMPTION.

Their nature and effect through the merits of Christ, 126. The value and reward of His merits, 126-129. The benefits individually—viz., His satisfaction and propitiation, 129-131; redemption, 131-136; impetration, 136-141. His merits in relation to the salvation of mankind, 141-143.

CHAPTER X.

OF FAITH IN JESUS CHRIST.

Definition of faith in general, 144. Faith Divine and human, 145. Their relative certainty, ib. Divine faith, how described in Scripture, 145, 146. Faith in Christ defined, 146. His office as our heavenly teacher, 146, 147. The character of His doctrine, 147. The necessity of belief therein, and in Himself to salvation, and how those before His coming saved, 147-151. The means of our knowledge of the nature of His revealed truths, 151.

CHAPTER XI.

OF THE RULE OF FAITH.

By whom a rule of faith left, 152. Its essential properties, whence shown, 152, 153. Its necessity, 153. The Protestant as distinguished from the Catholic rule, 153, 154. How the true rule to be determined, 154. The character of the written Word alone, as a rule of faith, and the consequence, 154-158. That of the Catholic rule or written Word as interpreted by the Church, 158-163. The Church, therefore, the rule, 163, 164. Farther direct proofs of this, and how these more fully appear, 164. Tradition treated, 165-174. Importance of knowledge of the Church, 174. What the Apostles' Creed proves concerning her, 174, 175.
CONTENTS.

CHAPTER XII.

OF THE CHURCH.

The Church of Christ defined, 176. In what her members one, 176, 177. Of whom composed, and their relations to each other, 177-183. Her supreme Head, 183. Her visible Head on earth, 184-187. Her doctrinal infallibility, 187, 188. That of her visible Head alone, 188-194. The consequences that follow from the reasoning of this and the preceding chapter as respects the Church herself, and those out of her communion, 194-196. How she is to be distinguished, 196.

CHAPTER XIII.

OF THE MARKS OF THE CHURCH.

The Church of Christ essentially one, 197, 198; holy, 198, 199; catholic, 199-202; apostolical, 202-204; perpetual in duration and infallible, 204-206. All these required marks found in the Catholic Church alone, 206-214. That, therefore, the only true Church, 214. The faith of Christ as received from her, and obedience to His commands, essential to salvation, 214, 215.

CHAPTER XIV.

OF THE LAW OF GOD IN GENERAL.

CHAPTER XV.

OF THE COMMANDS OF THE CHURCH.

These in general, 222. In particular, ib. Obedience thereto, how binding on us, 222, 223. In what light represented in Scripture, 223, 224. (SECTION I.) THE FIRST COMMAND.—Enjoins hearing Mass on Sundays and holidays, and rest from servile work, 224. Its design, ib. God's requirement of the duty to which it relates, how manifested, 224, 225. By whom Christian holidays appointed, and the observance of the first day of the week ordained, 225. For what end holidays appointed, and in what manner to be kept, 225, 226. Why hearing Mass the only pious exercise enjoined, 226, 227. The breach, and proper idea of the Command, 227, 228. (SECTION II.)—THE SECOND COMMAND.—Enjoins fasting and abstinence at certain times, 229. The particular times, ib. The design of the command, ib. The terms fasting and abstinence defined, ib. How the authority for the former and Divine command of the latter practice, their observance and benefits, appear from Scripture, 229-235. Why the times and manner of fasting not determined by God, 235. His power to the Church to appoint these—how exercised, 236. The duty of the people, 236, 237. The prescribed rule, 237, 238. Of the gradual laxity in its observance, and decrees of the Church regarding, 238-241. Of the collation specially, 241, 242. Exemption from fasting—the plea of health not always valid, 242-244. The fear of ridicule, 244-246. (SECTION III.)—THE THIRD AND FOURTH COMMANDS.—Enjoin approaching the Sacraments of Penance and Holy Communion once a-year, the latter at Easter, 246. Their design, 246-248. The sin of neglect of our Easter duties without just cause, 248. When non-observance excusable, ib. (SECTION IV.)—THE FIFTH COMMAND.—Enjoins payment of tithes to our pastors, 248. Its design, 248, 249. Whence the duty of their support arises, 249-254. The law of the Church in relation thereto, and its observance, 254, 255. (SECTION V.)—THE SIXTH COMMAND.—Forbids marriage at certain times and within certain degrees, 255. These special times, ib. Presence at marriage during them, 256. Within what degrees, and why marriage forbidden, 256-258. The effect of the prohibition, 258. Of dispensation therefrom, 258-260. Generally, what necessary effectually to avoid transgression of the Divine laws, 260.
CONTENTS.

CHAPTER XVI.

OF SIN.

Digitized by Microsoft®
CONTENTS.

CHAPTER XVII.

OF REPENTANCE.

CHAPTER XVIII.

OF THE GRACE OF GOD.

CHAPTER XIX.

OF THE SACRAMENTS IN GENERAL.

In what a true sacrament consists, 369. Its requisites, design, and effect when received with proper dispositions, 369–376, 378, 379. The
CONTENTS.

CHAPTER XX.

OF THE SACRAMENT OF BAPTISM.

Its design, 401. Its character, institution, outward form, and inward grace, 401-403. Its administration, 403, 404. (Section I.)—Its Effects, 404-407. (Section II.)—Its Necessity.—Essential in general to salvation, 407-409. When salvation possible without it, 409, 410. Of children who die unbaptised, 410. How often to be received, 410, 411. The dispositions required to obtain its graces, 411. (Section III.)—Its Ceremonies.—What to be observed generally with respect to, 411, 412. Their division into,—(1.) those which precede, 412-416; (2.) those which accompany, 416-418; (3.) those which succeed, 418—the sacramental action. (Section IV.)—Godfathers and Godmothers.—Why required, 419. Their number, ib. Their qualifications, ib. Their obligations, 419, 420. The kindred they contract by their office, 420.

CHAPTER XXI.

OF THE SACRAMENT OF CONFIRMATION.

Its design, 421. Its character, institution, outward action, and inward grace or effects, and how often to be received, 422-425, 426. Our cooperation necessary to its full benefits, 425. The dispositions essential to its worthy receiving, 426, 427. The sin of its neglect, 427, 428. Its ceremonies, 428-429.
ENGRAVINGS.

Portrait of Bishop Hay, from the Painting at St Mary's College, Blairs, by George Watson, President of the Scottish Academy,  Frontispiece.

The Chapel, and Residence of Bishop Hay, still existing in Blackfriars Wynd. Engraved from a Drawing by Charles Doyle,  Page xxv.

Facsimile of the Handwriting of Bishop Hay, taken from his MSS. in St Mary's College, Blairs,  Page xxviii.
MEMOIR.

Since the religious revolution of the sixteenth century, no man has the Catholic Church in Scotland been so much indebted as to Bishop Hay. He is pre-eminently her bishop of the last three hundred years.

He appeared at a time when the prospects of religion in this country were the most gloomy—when Catholic interests and Catholic hopes had sunk to the lowest point. At present it is difficult, if not impossible, fully to realise what was then the position of Catholics in Scotland. The systematic work of depression which had been carried on for years by the grinding operation of the penal laws, seemed to be completed by the disastrous rising in favour of the Stuarts in 1745. With their cause all the Catholic families of wealth and influence in the kingdom had identified themselves, and the result was widespread ruin.

The Catholic body was left crushed and dispirited. Many fled to seek an asylum in foreign countries; and those who still clung to their native land were, with few exceptions, stripped of everything.

In their poverty and sufferings it was difficult for them... even to retain their faith. They were without churches, and almost without pastors to minister to their spiritual wants or to impart instruction; and consequently, not only individuals but many entire families fell away from their religion. In this trying crisis, the zeal, energy, and apostolic labours of a single, unpretending, but truly great prelate, contributed materially to the preservation of the faith. Indeed he may be justly said to have gathered together and consolidated the scattered fragments of the ancient Church in Scotland, for much of what she now possesses is the result of his wise and vigorous administration.

The Right Rev. Dr George Hay was born at Edinburgh, August 24, 1729. He was the only son of Mr James Hay, a non-juring Episcopalian, who had been put in irons and sentenced to banishment for his adherence to the Stuarts in 1715. From his mother he received early religious impressions, and by her was taught the practice of night and morning prayer, a circumstance to which he looked back with gratitude in later life. Being destined for the medical profession, in his sixteenth year he entered the Edinburgh University, then rising to the zenith of its fame. There he rapidly distinguished himself in his studies; and some of his fellow-students, themselves eminent, afterwards declared that had he persevered, he would have stood at the head of his profession. But his medical studies were interrupted, and finally abandoned.

The Highland army, under Prince Charles Stuart, entered Edinburgh on the 17th September 1745, and found many of the citizens secretly disposed to favour them. Mr George Lauder, Mr Hay's professor, was an enthusiast in the cause, and many of his pupils were animated by the same spirit. He was appointed chief surgeon to the Prince's army, and, in a few days, was called to attend the wounded on the field of Prestonpans. Mr Hay, who had been educated in the political principles of his family, willingly accompanied his professor, and followed the fortunes of the army in its march into England.

Digitized by Microsoft®

On its retreat, his health being broken by exposure and fatigue, he was unable to proceed beyond Crieff, and therefore returned to Edinburgh in February 1746. As he had served not in a military but purely professional capacity, assisting indiscriminately the sick and wounded of both armies, he hoped he would be put to no trouble. He was soon undeceived, however, for he was first committed to Edinburgh Castle for three months, and thence removed to London along with other prisoners implicated in the same cause. In London his captivity was not a rigorous one, but twelve months elapsed before his liberation under the Habeas Corpus Act in June 1747.

For himself he had no longer any cause of apprehension, but fearing lest he might be cited in evidence against some of the unfortunate adherents of the Stuarts, he retired to the seat of Sir Walter Montgomery, a relative in Ayrshire.
As soon as all danger of this seemed past, he returned to Edinburgh and resumed his medical studies. Other important matters, however, now occupied his thoughts. Naturally he was of a serious cast of mind, and this had been strengthened by early training. But that he had no Catholic tendencies is sufficiently evident from the fact, that in the fervour of youth he had bound himself by a double vow to read a portion of the Bible daily; and to do his utmost to extirpate Popery from his native country. In London, however, he had chanced to hear the doctrines of the Catholic Church explained by an English gentleman, in a manner which excited his surprise; and in his retreat in Ayrshire he had fallen upon a well-known little work, A Papist represented and misrepresented, or a twofold character of Popery. Doubts were excited in his mind, and Mr Hay was not of a character to set aside doubts upon an important subject without due investigation.

As the surest means of obtaining correct information regarding the Catholic faith, he resolved to apply to a Catholic priest, and accordingly obtained an introduction to Sir Alexander Seaton, the Jesuit missionary, then resident in Edinburgh. From him he received the information and explanation he desired, and after a lengthened course of instruction was received into the Catholic Church. On the Feast of St Thomas, 21st December 1749, he made his first communion with extraordinary fervour—a fervour in which he happily persevered to the end of his long and useful life.

Mr Hay, in embracing the Catholic faith, had no idea of relinquishing the medical profession. On the contrary, he continued to prosecute his studies with his characteristic vigour, became a member of the Royal Medical Society, and took a lively interest in everything becoming his position. He soon discovered, however, that his prospects of success in life must be materially injured by his change of religion. By the penal laws he was debarred from graduating in the University, and from obtaining the diploma of the Royal College of Surgeons. These restrictions naturally excited a desire of leaving Scotland, and of retiring to some foreign country, where he might enjoy liberty of conscience and have the prospect of rising in his profession. With this view he accepted the appointment of surgeon on board a trading-vessel chartered for the Mediterranean.

While in London making the necessary arrangements for his departure, he was introduced to the illustrious Bishop Challoner, who was himself a convert, and could therefore sympathise with the young Scotch surgeon, driven from his home by the intolerant laws of his country. The Bishop soon discovered his genuine worth. He admired his vigorous intellect, sound judgment, and depth of religious feeling, and was probably in no small degree instrumental in leading Mr Hay to devote himself to the service of God and his neighbour in the ecclesiastical state. Certain it is that the acquaintance of these two remarkable men at this time led to their being afterwards united in the bonds of the closest friendship. At a later period they entered into a pious compact, that on the death of either, the survivor should offer up the holy sacrifice three times every week for the repose of his soul; and this engagement Dr Hay fulfilled with scrupulous fidelity for nearly a quarter of a century after the decease of his esteemed friend.

But whatever was the advice given by Dr Challoner at this time, or whatever effect it may have had upon Mr Hay's mind, he was not a person to decide hastily in such an important matter. He took full time for mature deliberation, proceeded to the Mediterranean, completed his engagement there, and it was not till the 10th September 1751 that he entered the Scotch College in Rome—nearly two years after he had embraced the Catholic faith. There he found only nine students, but that little band contained no less than four persons who were afterwards well known by their services to religion—the Rev. William Guthrie, Bishop Geddes, Bishop John M'Donald, and Cardinal Erskine.

In Rome he spent eight years in the study of philosophy and theology, and his progress is well attested by the valuable works with which he afterwards favoured the world. But his chief care during his college life was to sanctify himself, by the exact and fervent discharge of all his religious duties. Having completed his course of studies in the Scotch College, he was ordained priest, and immediately set out for the scene of his future labours, accompanied by the Rev. Messrs John Geddes and William Guthrie. They travelled through France and embarked at Dunkirk; but knowing that the greatest vigilance was exercised by the British Government to prevent the ingress of Catholic priests, they avoided the principal ports, and landed at Burntisland on the eve of the Assumption, 1759. Next day they presented themselves to Bishop Smith at Edinburgh, and Mr Hay was appointed to assist Bishop Grant, coadjutor in the important mission of Preshome, Banffshire. Here he began his missionary career, and laboured for eight years with untiring zeal in the work of the ministry—preaching, administering the sacraments, and promoting every pious practice among the faithful.

On the death of Bishop Smith, in 1767, Mr Hay was appointed to accompany Bishop Grant, now Vicar Apostolic, to Edinburgh, to arrange the papers of the deceased prelate. This he executed to the satisfaction of all concerned, discharging at the same time the duties of procurator of the mission, and serving the congregation.

Bishop Grant, whose constitution had been shattered by rigorous confinement in the prison of Inverness, soon perceived that his increasing infirmities rendered the nomination of a coadjutor and successor necessary, and he felt no hesitation in making his selection. The piety, learning, and ability of Mr Hay recommended him as the person eminently qualified for the arduous and difficult position. Bishop Grant therefore procured his appointment, and, assisted by Drs Hugh and John M'Donald, consecrated him Bishop of Daulia (in partibus) at Scalan on Trinity Sunday, the 19th May 1769.

From that day the whole burden of the Vicariate may be said to have devolved on him; for the Vicar Apostolic, no longer able to perform the duties of his office, transferred all his faculties to his coadjutor. Henceforth Bishop Hay becomes more properly a subject of history than of biography, for a full account of his life would necessarily embrace all the important events connected with the Catholic Church in Scotland during his long episcopate.

Bishop Hay was unremitting in his attention to his flock, hearing confessions, visiting the sick, and giving instructions almost continuously. Preaching he regarded as the indispensable duty of every pastor of souls; and he himself was most assiduous in that duty. He spoke in a plain, familiar, and unaffected style; and his discourses, enriched with a variety of texts from Holy Scripture, were admirably calculated to convince the understanding and to gain the heart. His edifying example stimulated the zeal of the clergy under his charge, and his frequent Pastorals enlightened and directed them in the discharge of their duties.

To the general interests of his extensive Vicariate Dr Hay gave the most vigilant attention, visiting the various missions and corresponding frequently with his clergy. But his active charity did not rest there; he published the first English Catholic version of the Holy Scriptures printed in Scotland, and made incredible exertions to supply the faithful with pious and instructive books. He composed several excellent works in defence of religion, and entered with ardour into all the measures, then in agitation, for the repeal of the penal laws against Catholics. To attend to such a multiplicity of affairs must have necessitated a rigorous disposition of time, but the regularity of Dr Hay's life enabled him to utilise every moment. He rose very early, made an hour's meditation, recited Prime, Tierce, Sext, and None; then prepared himself, by long and fervent acts of devotion, for saying Mass; heard another, if possible; and concluded his morning exercises with spiritual reading, from the best ascetic writers. The day he devoted to business, and in the evening recited the Divine Office. At eight o’clock he retired for an hour’s contemplation before the blessed Sacrament; and after supper and evening prayers, resumed his studies till midnight, when he usually retired to rest. The life of this holy bishop was a finished model of that humility and self-denial which he so strenuously inculcated in his writings.

Yet Bishop Hay was always cheerful and agreeable. His virtue had nothing in it gloomy or morose, for, though severe to himself, he was ever condescending and tender to others. Conformity to the will of God was his favourite virtue and the subject of his daily meditation. Hence arose that resignation to all the appointments of Divine Providence which no accident seemed capable of disturbing, and that meekness which the most injurious treatment could not arouse to resentment. To aid others in acquiring this virtue of conformity, he made a collection of the different passages of Scripture in which it is enforced; and he used to comment on them with singular delight and devotion. The serenity of his mind was truly marvellous. Once only—on learning that His Holiness, Pius VI., was a prisoner in the hands of the French Revolutionists—was it observed to give way, and then but for a short time. He retired to his oratory, and there, in presence of the blessed Sacrament, soon regained his usual placid resignation. His peace rested on God, and nothing earthly could permanently disturb it. It may readily be supposed that the claims of the poor were not disregarded by such a man as Bishop Hay. They received due attention at his hands. In the frequent visitation of his Vicariate he distributed liberal memorials, and gave medical advice to the sick poor who could not procure a physician.

Not long after his promotion to the episcopate, the Catholics in the island of Uist were subjected to a cruel persecution. One of the principal proprietors of the island, wishing to eradicate the ancient faith, served notice of ejectment upon all the Catholics on his estate, leaving them the choice of apostasy or eviction. The poor people at once adopted the only alternative which conscience allowed, and were ruthlessly driven from their homes. The misery of the persecuted and suffering islanders aroused the active sympathy of Bishop Hay. He made a powerful and successful appeal on their behalf to the charity of the Catholics of Great Britain, and by this means enabled them to cross over to North America. They were accompanied in their forced exile by Mr Macdonald of Glenaladale, who sold his property in Scotland, and generously devoted himself to the protection of his poor countrymen. Thus commenced that system of emigration which eventually depopulated many parts of the Highlands, and laid the foundation of a powerful and prosperous Catholic colony in North America. The brave exiles transmitted their faith to their descendants, and taught them to revere the memory of their benefactor, Bishop Hay.

Bishop Hay first appeared as an author in 1771, in a spirited detection of the errors contained in a sermon published by a celebrated Presbyterian minister of Aberdeen. This was followed by his Letters on Usury and Interest, in which he throws much light on a difficult subject, and reconciles the practice of taking interest with the doctrine of the Scriptures. The dispute upon the subject of miracles between Dr Middleton and his antagonists, induced Bishop Hay to write his Scripture Doctrine of Miracles Displayed, which is, perhaps, the best work that has appeared on that difficult and important subject. Not long after, his Sincere, Devout, and Pious Christian were successively laid before the public, and were received with much favour. The Catholic Bishops of Ireland bestowed on them the highest encomiums, and strongly recommended them to the use of the faithful. The reputation of Dr Hay as an author was now established, and the most distinguished prelates in both kingdoms entered into correspondence with him.

Digitized by Microsoft®

The British Government having at length evinced a disposition to repeal some of the most oppressive of the penal laws which had so long been a disgrace to the legislature, Bishop Hay seized the favourable moment to procure some relief for the Catholics of Scotland, who felt even more heavily than their brethren in England and Ireland the iron rod of persecution. The fanatics, all over Scotland, immediately took alarm. Declarations and Resolutions were everywhere published against the mitigation of the penal statutes. The press teemed with misrepresentations and calumnies, the pulpits resounded with furious invectives against Catholics. The popular fury was especially directed against the Bishop, and a day was fixed for burning the chapel and house which he had lately built in Chalmers' Close, High Street. Handbills were distributed inviting all to aid in the good work, as it was impiously termed; and at length, on the 2d of February 1779, the mob assembled, and, with the assistance of five hundred sailors from Leith, proceeded to their work of destruction. Repeated applications were made to the Lord Provost for protection against the rioters, but he was deaf to all entreaties. The Duke of Buccleuch, and some other officers, fired with indignation at such daring excesses, hastened, with a few troops, to the spot, seized the most forward of the incendiaries, and would have dispersed the mob, but the authorities positively refused to allow him to proceed, and the work of destruction went on. The chapel and house were soon reduced to ashes, and the rabble then spread themselves over the city, burning and destroying everything belonging to Catholics which came in their way. At this crisis Bishop Hay arrived from London, and, unaware of the state of matters, proceeded on his way home. The unusual crowd in the street, however, soon attracted his attention, and addressing a woman whom he met near the foot of Blackfriars Wynd, he asked her what it meant. "Oh, sir," she replied, "we are burning the Popish chapel, and we only wish we had the Bishop to throw him into the fire." — (Abbé Macpherson's Hist. of Scott. Missions.) The Bishop prudently turned aside, and found an asylum in the Castle, where a number of his flock had taken refuge.

The next morning the mob plundered the chapel-house in Blackfriars Wynd, and attempted to destroy the residence of Principal Robertson, who had courageously opposed their lawless proceedings on the previous day.

After a few days Bishop Hay returned to London, and, through the interest of Mr Burke and other influential friends in Parliament, succeeded in obtaining some indemnification for the sufferers in the riot. The erection of another chapel and chapel-house in Edinburgh, however, was retarded for many years. Dr Hay deemed it prudent to continue in his humble dwelling in Blackfriars Wynd, and to use the upper floor as a chapel. It was not till 1814 that St Mary's, Broughton Street, was built by his successor, Bishop Cameron.

Upon the death of Bishop Grant in 1778, Bishop Hay became Vicar Apostolic, and selected the Rev. John Geddes, his college companion, a clergyman of distinguished merit, as coadjutor.
MEMOIR.

The Scotch College at Rome had, for some years, been in a very unsatisfactory state. Those intrusted with the administration of it, after the suppression of the Jesuits, had given occasion to many complaints. Repeated remonstrances proved ineffectual, and at length Bishop Hay resolved to go in person and lay the case before His Holiness. His desire to have the Statuta Missionis approved and printed furnished a pretext for the journey, and he set out for Italy in the summer of 1781. Passing through Germany, he visited the Scotch Benedictine monasteries at Wurzburg and Ratisbon, and arrived in Rome about the middle of October. Cardinal Antonelli, Prefect of Propaganda, received him with marked distinction, and soon after he was admitted to a private audience of the Holy Father. His great object was to get national superiors placed in the Scotch College. After repeated conferences on the subject with Albani, Cardinal Protector of Scotland, he obtained his consent to the immediate admission of a member of the Scotch mission, with a promise that in a little time the entire administration should be placed in his hands. Many years elapsed, however, before the desired change was effected.

After a stay of six months at Rome, Bishop Hay returned to Scotland. Soon after his arrival, the illness and subsequent death of the Rev. Andrew Dawson obliged him to remove to Scalan. Here, in addition to the work of the mission, he superintended the cultivation of the farm attached to the Seminary, composed small treatises for the use of the students, and taught them the elements of literature. His leisure moments he devoted to the study of metaphysics, for which he had a special predilection, and made a compendium of Reid's Inquiry into the Human Mind. From this congenial employment he was recalled, by the illness of Bishop Geddes, to resume his former functions in Edinburgh, where affairs of vital importance soon absorbed his whole attention.

By the destruction of the Scotch Missionary Colleges on the Continent, the prospect of future labourers in the ministry was destroyed. This calamity was deeply felt by Bishop Hay, but it did not shake his confidence in God. With his usual energy he applied himself to remedy the evil, and though possessed of very slender means, began to build a new Seminary at Aquhorties. Thither, on its completion in 1799, he removed the students from Scalan, and laid the foundation of an establishment which afterwards supplied Scotland with many distinguished priests.

All hope of the recovery of Bishop Geddes being now at an end, Dr Hay was obliged to nominate another coadjutor, and after mature deliberation he made choice of the Rev. Alexander Cameron. From personal acquaintance with this gentleman, he had formed a high idea of his virtue and talents; and that idea had been confirmed by the ability which Mr Cameron had displayed in the government of the Scotch College in Spain. The appointment gave general satisfaction, and Dr Hay applied to Rome for the Papal Briefs. On the 13th of August 1797 he informed Mr Cameron himself of his promotion, conjuring him to hasten to his assistance, and to relieve him of a burden which he was no longer able to support. The distracted state of the Continent, however, prevented Bishop Cameron, for a considerable time, from undertaking his journey; but at length, tranquillity being restored by the peace of Amiens, he embarked for Scotland.

On the 20th of August 1802, Mr Cameron arrived in Edinburgh; and Bishop Hay, following the example of his predecessor, Bishop Grant, immediately imparted to him complete faculties to govern the Vicariate. It was, indeed, his anxious wish to be entirely freed from the responsibility of his charge; but this being a case specially reserved to the Holy See, he could not resign without the express permission of the Holy Father. Cardinal Antonelli, to whom he had, long before, intimated his desire, positively refused to countenance any application of the kind, and insisted, in the name of the Sacred Congregation, that he should continue to govern the Mission while he had strength to do so. Indeed it was only a few years before his death, when mental and bodily prostration rendered it impossible for him any longer to superintend the affairs of the Vicariate, that His Holiness could be prevailed upon to accept his resignation.

The zeal and prudence of his coadjutor, however, did much to lessen the burden of responsibility on Dr Hay, and to reconcile him to his position. He had unbounded confidence in Dr Cameron, and he, on his part, did nothing without the advice and consent of his superior.

At length he was relieved of his charge, and he retired to the Seminary at Aquhorties to prepare for death. Here he devoted himself to prayer and pious reading until his mental faculties began to give way. The intense study and continual mortification of his long and active life had worn him out, and he sank, literally exhausted by labour, into a second childhood. In this state, rendered still more affecting by the loss of speech from paralysis, he continued for nearly two years, enjoying, in other respects, comparatively good health. At last a severe illness exhausted his remaining strength, and he gradually sank till his death, on the 15th of October 1811, in the eighty-third year of his age, and forty-third of his episcopal dignity.

The influence which Bishop Hay had so long exercised in the cause of religion did not die with him. It has been perpetuated and extended by his writings. Nor is this surprising when we consider their character and spirit. The study of the Holy Scriptures was the comfort and the solace of his life; and his writings show how copiously he drew from that sacred source. Indeed, in perusing them we forget the individual and see before us only a saintly prelate filled with the thought of God and His Divine truth, teaching and exhorting through the Scriptures. The more we examine his works, the more clearly do we see how appropriately they bear their unpretending, but expressive, title—The Sincere, Devout, and Pious Christian, instructed in the faith of Christ from the Written Word.
Specimens of Bishop Hay's Handwriting, in 1762 and 1789.

Of the Soul of Man, its powers, passions, and affections &c.

1. The spiritual, & intellectual, &c. &c.

De exercitio spiritualibus, die 21 Dec. 1789. Sanctoro Thomæ Apostolo dicato, incohati, sequentiae notandae veniant.

Digitized by Microsoft ®
THE

SINCERE CHRISTIAN

INSTRUCTED IN

THE FAITH OF CHRIST FROM THE WRITTEN WORD.

INTRODUCTION.

JESUS CHRIST, the eternal wisdom of God, who is Himself "the way, the truth, and the life," addressing His heavenly Father, pronounces this sacred oracle: "This is eternal life, that they may know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom Thou has sent," John xvii. 3.

The securing to ourselves eternal life is the great end for which we were created; it is the "one thing necessary," without which we are lost for ever; it is an affair of all others the most important, or rather, it is the only important affair we have to think of: "For what shall it profit a man, if he gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" Mark viii. 36. Seeing, then, that the knowledge of God the Father, and of Jesus Christ, His Son, in such a manner as we are capable of knowing THEM in... this world, is declared by Christ Himself to be the eternal life of our souls—that is, to be the necessary and undoubted means of acquiring that eternal life, and of bringing us to the full knowledge and possession of God in the world to come—how much ought we to esteem that Divine knowledge! How assiduous and careful ought we to be to get ourselves fully instructed in it!

What will it profit a man to know all things else, if he be ignorant of his God and of his Saviour? What though he understand the motions of the stars, the measure of the earth, and the whole circle of human sciences, if he be ignorant of that important science, the science of the saints, which alone will conduct him to eternal bliss? “If any man consents not,” says St Paul, “to the sound words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to that doctrine which is according to godliness, he is proud, knowing nothing, but sick about questions and strifes of words,” 1 Tim. vi. 3. To promote this heavenly wisdom among men, to instruct the ignorant in the knowledge of the great truths of God and of eternity, has at all times been esteemed by the Christian world as a most sublime employment: and God Himself has promised a most ample reward to those who practise it, saying, by His holy prophet Daniel, “They that are learned shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that instruct many to justice, as stars for all eternity,” Dan. xii. 3. Hence it is, that, in every age, we find men of the greatest genius and learning, who have employed themselves with great zeal in instructing the ignorant in the truths of salvation, both by their apostolical labours during their lifetime, and by the pious monuments of their charity and zeal which they have left behind them in their valuable writings, for the benefit of future ages. To contribute my mite towards so laudable a purpose is the design of the present publication; to which I have been induced by several considerations.

I have often thought that the great truths of Christianity, if digested in a regular orderly method, so that the establishing one point should be a prelude and preparation to the next, would show that Divine religion in a more amiable point of view, and be a great ease and help both to those who are to instruct others, and to those who are learners: this idea has been confirmed by frequent experience, and I hope that the method which I have found so useful may prove equally beneficial to others. There are many excellent works published in our language upon different parts of religion; but I am afraid they too often suppose the generality of their readers better instructed in these matters than they commonly are, and are written more for the learned than the ignorant. The view I have had in this present work is to assist the most unlearned, and beginning with the first rudiments of Christianity, to conduct the reader, step by step, through the whole body of the principal truths of revelation, so that the knowledge of one truth may serve as an introduction to those which follow.

The sacred Scriptures are an inexhaustible fountain of heavenly knowledge, but are commonly less used than they might be in illustrating and establishing the truths of religion. A text or two hinted at now and then seem lost in the multitude of other reflections and reasons which surround them; but, when the principal stress both of the explanation and proof is laid upon these Divine oracles, and a number of texts are placed in the proper order for illustrating the point in question, they give an incredible force to what is proposed, show that it is God Himself who speaks, and cut off all occasion for human sophistry to enter. This I have had in a particular manner in view in these instructions, and have endeavoured to collect together the several testimonies of the Word of God where the point in question is explained, illustrated, or established; that, showing the constant uniform doctrine of the Holy Scripture, I might bring full and complete conviction to the mind. Some may perhaps think I have crowded too many texts together on some occasions; but I have had in view the benefit of those who are to instruct others, that they may have a proper variety out of which to choose what they may find, by experience, to be most adapted to the various capacities of their pupils.

After this brief explanation of the plan and design of the work, I have only two things to recommend to my readers. The first is, to make themselves masters of one chapter before they proceed to another—to consider it well, to comprehend it, to penetrate the force of the reasons used in it. This will render the understanding of what follows easier, and, at the same time, more satisfactory and convincing. The second thing is, when examining the proofs from Scripture brought for any controverted point, not to consider so much how far the ingenuity of man could wrest the meaning of any particular text to a sense different from what it is brought to prove; but to consider what is the plain, natural, obvious meaning of all the various texts brought together in proof of the point proposed; for this surely must be presumed to be the sense intended by the Holy Ghost.
THE
SINCERE CHRISTIAN INSTRUCTED IN
THE FAITH OF CHRIST FROM THE WRITTEN WORD.

CHAPTER I.

OF GOD.

Q. 1. WHAT is God?
A. God is a Spirit infinitely perfect, the Creator and Sovereign Lord of all things.

Q. 2. What do you mean by a Spirit?
A. An immaterial being, quite distinct from body; now God is a most pure, uncreated Spirit, without any body; and those expressions of Scripture where mention is made of the hands of God, or His feet, or the like, are only figurative ways of speaking, accommodated to our weak understandings.

Q. 3. What do you mean by infinitely perfect?
A. I mean that all possible perfections essentially belong to God, and are in Him in an infinite degree, without bounds or limitation.

Digitized by Microsoft®
Q. 4. What are the perfections of God?
A. Power, wisdom, goodness, justice, mercy, holiness, truth, beauty, eternity, immensity, and many others, of which we can have no idea. So that God is infinitely powerful, infinitely wise, infinitely good, infinitely just, infinitely merciful, infinitely holy, infinitely true, infinitely beautiful, eternal, immense, and unchangeable.

Q. 5. What do you mean by infinitely powerful?
A. I mean that God can do all things whatsoever He pleases, and in what manner He pleases; so that nothing is impossible or difficult to Him.

Q. 6. How does this appear from Scripture?
A. On this head the Scripture declares (1.) That “with God all things are possible,” Mat. xix. 26; and that “no word shall be impossible with God,” Luke, i. 37. (2.) That He created this world, and all that it contains, out of nothing, by His word alone; for “in the beginning God created the heavens and the earth,” Gen. i. 1. “He made the heavens and the earth, the sea and all things that are in them,” Ps. cxxv. 6. “In Him were all things created, in heaven and on earth, visible and invisible, whether thrones or dominations, or principalities or powers, all things were created by Him and in Him,” Col. i. 16. “He spoke the word, and they were made; He commanded, and they were created,” Ps. cxxviii. 5. (3.) That He can do in all creatures whatsoever He pleases; for “whatsoever the Lord pleased He hath done in heaven, in earth, in the sea, and in all the depths,” Ps. cxxxiv. 6. (4.) That “all things are in His power, and that there is none that can resist His will,” Esther, xiii. 9; for “He alone is mighty, the King of kings, and Lord of lords,” 1 Tim. vi. 15.

Q. 7. What do you mean by infinitely wise?
A. I mean that God knows all things, past, present, and to come, even the most secret thoughts of the heart of man, and all things that possibly can be.

Q. 8. How is this proved?

A. His holy Word declares that “there is no creature invisible in His sight; for all things are naked and open in the eyes of Him with whom we speak,” Heb. iv. 13. “The works of all flesh are before Him, and there is nothing hid from his eyes; He sees from eternity to eternity, and there is nothing wonderful before Him,” Ecclus. xxxix. 24. “For the eyes of the Lord are far brighter than the sun, beholding round about all the ways of men, and the bottom of the deep, and looking into the hearts of men, into the most secret parts; for all things were known to the Lord God before they were created; so also after they were perfected, He beholdeth all things,” Ecclus., xxiii. 28. “The heart is perverse above all things, and unsearchable, who can know it? I am the Lord who search the heart and prove the reins,” Jer. xvii. 10.

Q. 9. What do you mean by infinitely good?

A. I mean that as God is infinitely perfect and infinitely happy in Himself, so He has the most earnest desire of communicating Himself and His happiness to His creatures, and, in consequence of this, is continually bestowing good things upon them, according as they are capable of receiving them; for “every good and perfect gift is from above, coming down from the Father of lights,” James, i. 17. And God “giveth to all abundantly, and upbraideth not,” James, i. 5. All the creatures by whose means we receive any benefit are but the instruments God makes use of to communicate good things to us; for “there is none good but God alone,” Luke, xviii. 19.

Q. 10. What do you mean by infinitely just?

A. I mean that God gives to all men the necessary means of saving their souls, and will never require anything of us above our strength; so that we only are to blame, if we fail in our duty to Him: that, therefore, He will exercise the most impartial justice on all men, according to their deservings, without respect of persons; for, as St. Paul assures us, God will “render to every one according to his works; to them indeed who, according to patience in good works, seek glory, and honour, and incorruption, (He will render) eternal life; but to them who are contentious, and obey not the truth, but give credit to iniquity, (He will render) wrath and indignation,” Rom. ii. 6. That “He will not judge according to the sight of the eye, nor argue according to the hearing of the ear, but will judge in justice,” Isa. xi. 3; and that “He will not accept of any person, nor receive any gift,” Deut. x. 17.

Q. ii. What do you mean by infinitely merciful?

A. I mean that God has the most tender compassion for the miseries of His creatures, knowing their frailty and their weaknesses, and is most desirous and ready to deliver them from them; “He wills none to perish, but that all should come to repentance,” 2 Pet. iii. 9. “For, as I live, saith the Lord, I will not the death of a sinner; but rather that he should turn and live,” Ezek. xxxiii. 11. Hence “the Lord is gracious and merciful, patient and plenteous in mercy: the Lord is sweet to all, and His tender mercies are over all His works,” Ps. cxliv. 8; and “His mercy endureth for ever,” Ps. cxxxv. Yea, in the midst “of anger He will remember mercy,” Hab. iii. 2. For “as a father hath compassion on his children, so hath the Lord compassion on them that fear Him; for He knoweth our frame, He remembereth that we are dust. . . . But the mercy of the Lord is from eternity to eternity, upon them that fear Him,” Ps. cii. 13. Hence, “Thou hast mercy upon all, because Thou canst do all things, and overlookest the sins of men for the sake of repentance; for Thou lovest all things that are, and hatest none of the things that Thou hast made; for Thou didst not appoint or make any thing hating it. . . . But Thou sparest all, because they are Thine, O Lord, who lovest souls,” Wis. xi. 24.

Digitized by Microsoft ®

Q. 12. What do you mean by infinitely holy?
A. I mean that God is holiness itself, infinitely pure, and free from every spot or stain, or shadow of imperfection. Hence He is called in Scripture the Holy of Holies; and the blessed in heaven continually adore Him under this title, saying, “Holy, holy, holy, Lord God of Hosts,” Isa. vi. 3.

Q. 13. What do you mean by infinitely true?
A. I mean that God is truth itself; that He never can be deceived Himself, and that it is impossible He should deceive His creatures; for “God is true, but all men are liars,” Rom. iii. 4. “God is not like men, that He should lie,” Num. xxiii. 19. “God is faithful in all His words,” Ps. cxliv. 13. “And heaven and earth shall pass away; but My words,” says He, “shall not pass away,” Luke, xxi. 33.

Q. 14. What do you mean by infinitely beautiful?
A. I mean that God is beauty itself, infinitely lovely, infinitely excellent; that all the beauty and perfections which we see in creatures are but emanations of His divine beauty; and that, though all the beauties of the whole universe were collected together in one, it would be infinitely less than a spark of fire is to the sun, or a drop of water to the ocean, if compared to the beauty of God. “Let them know how much more the Lord of them is more beautiful than they; for the First Author of beauty made all those things,” Wis. xiii. 3. For from the rising of the sun to the going down thereof, out of Sion the loveliness of His beauty," Ps. xlix. 1. This Divine beauty is so great that all the blessed saints and angels in heaven are enraptured with inexpressible delight in the contemplation of it, and the enjoyment of it makes God Himself infinitely and essentially happy. Hence the Scripture says: "O taste and see how sweet the Lord is; blessed is the man that hopeth in Him," Ps. lxxiii. 9. "They shall be inebriated with the plenty of Thy house, and Thou shalt make them drink of the torrent of Thy pleasures; for with Thee is the fountain of life, and in Thy light we shall see light," Ps. xxxv. 9. "O how great is the multitude of Thy sweetness, O Lord, which Thou hast hidden for them that fear Thee! . . . Thou shalt hide them in the secret of Thy face," Ps. xxx. 20, 21.

Q. 15. What do you mean when you say God is eternal?

A. I mean that God had no beginning, and will have no end; that He always was, is, and ever will be; for "thus sayeth the High and the Eminent who inhabiteth eternity," Isa. lvii. 15. "Thou art the same, and Thy years shall not fail," Heb. i. 12. "I am the first and the last,—and behold I live for ever and ever," Rev. i. 17.

Q. 16. Had God no beginning?

A. No; God is a self-existent, necessary Being; from Himself alone, and wholly independent on any other; and therefore never had, nor could have, any beginning, but must have been from all eternity. Hence He says of Himself to Moses, "I AM WHO AM; thus shalt thou say to the children of Israel, HE WHO IS hath sent me to you," Exod. iii. 14. In order to show that He alone is essentially, and that all things else are a mere nothing in comparison to Him, according to that text, "Behold the nations are as a drop of a bucket, and are counted as

Digitized by Microsoft®